Toney Lands Early Scramble; Bats Decide Second Contest

Donovan's Team Puts Up Miserable Brand of Baseball on Both Occasions; Outfielder Neale Badly Hurt in Catching Fly, but Clings to the Pellet

By Charles A. Taylor

The Giants observed Memorial Day by capturing two games from Wild Bill Donovan's Feeble Fillies. The score of the morning encounter was 5 to 1 and of the afternoon batting battle, 13 to 7.

After making a close study of the two major league teams which represent the City of Brotherly Love, the Pathetics on Saturday and Sunday and the Fillies yesterday, it seems that even though the two aggregations, numbering some fifty-odd players, were combined into one whole, the "whole" would be so full of holes that no bush league manager would accept the combination with a silver platter thrown in for good

The presence of Judge Landis was due to the unveiling of the memorial to Captain Eddie Grant, former Giant, who lost his life in the Argonne Forest during the World War. The ceremony attending the unveiling was the most impressive the Polo Crounds has ever furnished a setting for.

So there was pathos and humor in generous quantities afforded the thou-sands of fans who somehow or other were unable or unwilling to heed the holiday call to more pleasant pastures of green than Henry Fabian's battle-worn sod.

Toney in Easy Victory

The pathos attendant upon the ceremony in connection with the unveiling of the Grant memorial is the theme of a separate story. The humor supplied by the antics of the Feeble Fillies in their endeavor to win at least one plied by the antics of the Feeble Fillies in their endeavor to win at least one ball game began to make its presence telt soon after the morning game started with less than 5,000 fans on hand.

Fred Toney was the Giant pitcher and his pathway was most smooth, although he allowed just as many hits as his two rival boxmen, Hubbell and Betts. As an illustration of the dire straits of Donovan's Fillies, a third hurler had to be introduced for pinch hitting purposes. His name is Baumgartner.

mitting purposes. His name is Baumgartner.

The Giants took a fancy to the curves of their former pal, Hubbell, in the first inning, which George Burns opened with a double down the left field foul line. Bancroft sacrificed Burns to third, and Fordham Frisch brought George the rest of the way home with a long fly to right, which was caught by Neale with one hand after a long run.

In making this sensational capture Neale crashed into the concrete wall and fell to the ground senseless, but still holding the ball. He was carried from the field and it was reported later that he was getting along nicely after two stitches had been taken over his left eye.

The Phillies, with Lee replacing Neale, tied the score in their half of the third and caused Toney his only real worry of the entire game. Two men were out when Irish Meusel hit to right for two bases. Wrightstone singled through Fordham Frisch and Meusel tallied.

McGraw Men Take the Lead

Toney, seemingly furious at such rough treatment, was the first batter to face Hubbell in the Giants' third, and he swung so wickedly that the ball dropped into the lower right field stand for a home run, which put the McGraw men once more in the lead. Although the Giants added three more runs to their total the Phillies curied up completely, getting only one more safe hit from Ponderous Fred.

In the olden days it was customary to give home runs a prominent place in baseball tales, but as they are no longer the novelty they were, the homers of yesterday may as well be mentioned at this late date. In addition to ers of yesterday may as well be mentioned at this late date. In addition to Toney, Ross Young in the first game and Earl Smith, Frank Snyder and "Buga" Bruggy, of Philly, all produced these sort of things in the second contest, in which twenty-two hits and nineteen runs were accumulated by the two teams jointly.

In this second session Phil Douglas and Bill Ryan did the pitching for the Giants, while George Smith, Cutey Keenan, Baumgarther and Hubbell were the moundsmen for the Phillies. There is no denying that Bill Donovan tried every means possible to turn in a

There is no denying that Bill Donovan tried every means possible to turn in a victory, but, as has been said by some sage, quantity is not quality, so his best efforts went for naught.

The Giants did the greater part of their damage in the second frame when they scored four runs through the medium of triples by Young and Walker, a single by Rapp and a home run by Earl Smith. In the third the New Yorkers fell upon Keenan, who had ousted George Smith as the visiting pitcher with such telling effect that two more runs resulted. A single by Frisch, a sacrifice by Young, a double by Kelly and a single by Walker produced the counters.

Scoring from this period on became fast and furious and this combined

When there did happen to be a lapse of a moment or two the Fort Slocum band played a little lively jazz just to keep the spirit moving.

Frank had the entire enemy infield chasing him between first and second in the eighth, but he eventually dived into the initial bag covered with dust and safe.

The feeble Fillies will appear in our midst again this afternoon, but with either Cecil Algernon Causey, Immy Ring or Lee Meadows twirling for the Quaker City boys there may be a different story. A bit of opposition would be welcome and keep the home lads in trim for their first invasion of the mid-West, which starts Thursday.

Mogridge Holds the Hugmen Scoreless and One Tally Gives Washington Victory

Special Dispatch to The Tribune WASHINGTON, May 30.-Two bril liant pitching duels featured the holiday double-header between the Yankees and the Senators here to-day. With Rip Collins pitching unbeatable ball in the morning, the New Yorkers chalked up their fifth consecutive victory. In the afternoon the shoe was on the other foot. MORNING GAME

Quinn, who opposed Mogridge, pitched a whale of a game, for all that the Senators made eight hits off him. He was cool and calm under fire and pulled out of several tough situations. Pipp had eighteen put-outs at first base and none of the infield chances were hard. However, the luck of the game broke against the veteran.

Collins, who hurled them over for the Yankees in the morning, looked like the Rip of mid-June last year. His curve ball broke nicely, while his fast one was really speedy.

Cardinals Ba. Freely And Down Reds Twice

CINCINNATI, May 30 .- The Card nals defeated the Reds in both ends of n holiday bill here to-day. The scor During the first six innings, the Senators ade only two hits. The first serious problem that confronted Collins came in the eighth inning. And in the emergency, Bob Meusel stepped right up with a capture that would have done credit to a Speaker.

The scores:

Of the morning contest was 9 to 4 and that of the afternoon was 7 to 4. Seven pitchers took cart in the second game. Marquard, Eller and Pertica were driven from the mound by the visitors.

Dark, rich backgrounds Quality suits that both Mogridge drank deeply of the nectarfilled cup in the afternoon. It was his first start against the Yankees. He hurled hitless ball for six innings and, with the exception of Bodie, who walked, not a Yankee saw the lines. In the seventh inning Babe Ruth cracked one to center for a single. In the ninth, McNally singled to center, completing the total of Yankee hits. Mogridge also fielded sensationally. Just once did the Yankees give George cause for even a fleeting second thought. In the ninth inning Huggins rushed in his reserves. Fewster was an easy out, but Roth, hitting for Mitchell, was safe on O'Rourke's error. Chick Hawks ran for Roth. McNally singled to right and it seemed Quality suits that b look and act the part. Prices moderate—ba on to-day's replacem Costs.
